Music programs fonds. - 1965-2010

9.5 m of textual records and other material

Music programs at the Centre began in 1936 with a two-week course in musical composition, interpretation, and performance for piano. A course in choral singing was added in 1938. Based on the model of the piano master class, additional programs in operatic singing and violin began in 1949 and 1951. Public chamber music recitals sponsored by the department began in 1953. In 1959 courses in music theory and woodwinds were added, followed by courses in teaching music to children in 1964 and additional master classes in brass (1966), percussion (1972), and classical guitar (1975). In 1971 the Banff School of Fine Arts Symphony Orchestra was revived with a series of guest conductors. Although a Jazz Workshop was launched in 1964, the Jazz Program was not established until 1974. Also in 1974 two additional programs were established: the Academy of String Quartets and the Canadian Chamber Orchestra Training Program, both for young professional musicians seeking advanced training with guest directors and conductors. Four Academies were added between 1978 and 1980, for Piano Chamber Music, Woodwinds, Brass, and Vocal Chamber Music. When the Centre adopted year-round programming in 1979, Advanced Studies in Music was founded to provide musicians and composers with 4-26 week residencies for independent studies. In 1983, the department sponsored the first of the triennial Banff International String Quartet Competitions. Courses in computer music and sound engineering were added in 1992 and 1994. The Department was responsible for the Voice and Opera programs until 1974.

Artistic Directors of Music and Sound during the period covered by these records include Thomas Rolston (1975-), Robert Aitken (1985-1989), Isobel Moore Rolston (1989-2006) and Barry Shiffman (2006-2010).

Fonds consists of administrative files, log and tour books, Jazz Program administrative files, jazz scores, concert programs and recordings, and Banff International String Quartet Competition files.

Includes 5 video recordings and 1750 audio recordings.

Music concert recordings series. – 1976-2010

Approximately 3,250 audio recordings

The Banff Centre began recording the jazz music concerts in 1976, and began to record classical music concerts in 1980. In the early 1990s, the installation of professional recording studio equipment, and the development of the Audio Engineering work study program, enabled the Centre to create high quality performance recordings, while giving new audio engineers valuable experience.

Since the 1970s, the tapes and CDs have been immediately transferred to the library, along with a copy of the program, to allow musicians to listen to their own recordings and to request duplicate copies.

Prior to 1997, the concert program information was not kept in electronic form, therefore the printed programs must be used to access information about the content of the recordings.
